

ABSTRACT

Banking sector is a well-established and also growing industry in India. Bank is backbone of financial service in our society. Fluctuation in bank's profitability is a major problem. This study is conducted to know the determinants of profitability of selected Nationalized Indian banks. In order to access and evaluate the profitability of nationalized banks of India and tries to figure out a best fitted model to it so that the most responsible factors can be determined and taken care of. Also the most commonly influencing factors affecting profitability of the banks have been identified using Panel data regression Analysis. Profitability has a fluctuating trend over the selected period of study, with an increase in recent two-three years.